During the month of June, the actions of this animal appeared very different from what we have noticed at any other time. They swam in pairs, remained for a longer time at the surface, and seemed to be borne along by the tide rather than urged forwards by their own volition. They moved in half circles, lying rather upon their sides, and occasionally lashing the water into foam with their tails--then both disappearing, one in a few seconds would rise at a little distance as if pursued--make a short leap above the surface of the water, and on falling, again--commence the same kind of semi-circular movement above described, accompanied by the other. We never observed them to show the beautiful inferior surface of their bodies at any other period, or to raise the tail fin above the water. But at this season, the whole...
