Reviews

An extremely wonderful pdf with perfect and lucid information. Better then never, though i am quite late in start reading this one. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Not illustrated. 1876 Excerpt: . . . when, quick as thought, the arm was upraised; I saw the glittering steel fly like a flash of lightning to his throat. A gurgling sound, half chuckle, and half groan, a stream of blood, and all was over. I raised him up, drew out the murderous weapon, tied up the throat; but his heart had ceased to beat--there was no struggle now. I knew that he was dead. I tried to open the doors or windows; but in vain--all were fast. There was I, in the presence of the dead. The tragedy had been enacted so suddenly, and I had been so full of excitement, that the after consequences had never had my consideration at all, and it was not till after assuring myself that no spark of life remained, that I began to think over the matter. Here was I, a stranger, and unable to speak the language. I had no friends in Paris to whom I could refer. My fellow-passenger dead, and the instrument that caused his death--a knife bearing my name. Oh! it was horrible! The lamp died out, and, for a time, the hideous sight was veiled by the darkness. When there was light, I longed for darkness, now that all was dark, a feeling of indescribable dread crept over me, and I longed for light; and at last it came--that pale, sickly, chilling light of a winters morning. I sat and watched it as it dawned, and, by degrees, lit up...
