Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A True Story of the Civil War On the morning of September 13, 1864, Getty's Division moved out towards the Opequan for a reconnoissance. The Vermont Brigade had the advance, the Third and Fourth being deployed in front as skirmishers. Sheridan and Wright accompanied the column. At ten o'clock the skirmishers reached the creek and crossed it at once, meeting the rebel pickets, however, but a short distance up the hill beyond. Capt. Cowen's Battery, going into position on an elevation on the hither side of the little stream, opened fire, the General hoping thus to discover the position of the enemy's camps in the vicinity, their strength, and other information of that nature. The battery could be plainly seen from the opposite side; the skirmishers who had crossed were showing an occasional puff of smoke from their rifles, while the rest of the Division were massed in a wood, a quarter of a mile behind the artillery.
